“Having danced with the Paul Taylor Dance Company, Donald Byrd's Spectrum Dance Theatre, Momix, and studied under many teachers of different genres, I've learned that approach is everything. Learning how to evolve as an artist and as a human being is what gives us the ability to perform and create. And to understand and adapt to the process of creation we have to become aware of how we face challenges. Dance class is the place to begin the process of integrating mind, body, and soul and then sharing that discovery. The class will focus on full-body movement exercises that will lead us into challenging the range and clarity of our movement and the space it inhabits. Exploring different textures of musicality and energy will help us find new ways of expressing our bodies. Articulation of the Legs and Back, traveling through space, and jumping will be emphasized.”
